2010 Census Redistricting Geography/MyDistrictBuilder - Update

Last week, we noted that our staff would be adding the official 2010 Census Redistricting Geography to MyDistrictBuilder. That process is complete, and three of the updated geographical layers are available for your use the next time you visit MyDistrictBuilder—counties, voting districts (VTDs), and census blocks.

If you have not visited MyDistrictBuilder before, you can access the application at <http://floridaredistrioting.cloudapp.net/MyDistrictBuilder.aspx>.

In the coming weeks, we will adding additional geographical options and ways to use the data. In the meantime, you may notice that some of the functionality you previously tested is not operable. For example, currently you cannot open the existing legislative and congressional districts. That functionality will return piece-by-piece, as we integrate the current features with the new geography.

Learn About Redistricting

Looking for a “Redistricting 101”? Look no further than our “Legislative Resources” at <http://www.floridaredistrioting.org/>. This week, we added the “Redistricting Timeline” and the “Concepts & Terminology” documents, two vital resources to plan for and understand the redistricting process.
