Florida House of Representatives – House Redistricting Committee Redistricting Update – June 20, 2011

Redistricting Meetings Start Today!

This week, the Florida House and Senate begin the first four of more than two dozen public input meetings on redistricting. For those Floridians at the public meetings, this is a once-in-a-decade opportunity to talk face-to-face with members of the Florida House and Florida Senate about how Florida's many diverse communities should be represented in the redrawn district maps.

For those Floridians who cannot attend the meetings, there are still many opportunities to watch the meetings and even participate via social media.

Watch Meeting Webcasts Live and Archived

First, Florida residents can visit <http://www.floridaredistriking.org/media.aspx> to watch the live webcast of redistricting meetings, via the Florida Channel. The calendar of public meetings can be found at www.floridaredistriking.org.

Participate via Facebook, Twitter and Email

Second, Florida residents can submit their comments via social media. It is recommended that social media participants clearly identify to which meeting they wish their comments to be directed. For example, including “#Tallahassee”, “#Pensacola”, “#FortWalton”, or “#PanamaCity” are easily recognizable ways to indicate that a comment is associated with a particular meeting.

Social media comments that are directed to any of the following will be included in the public record of the meeting. Time permitting, the comments may also be read aloud in the meeting.

After the Meetings

The records from these meetings – videos, podcasts, transcripts and more – will be archived and available via www.floridaredistrioting.org. Along with information submitted via the House's MyDistrictBuilder[™] online district building application and other outreach efforts, the collective input of the public can start, sustain and watch over Florida's redistricting process. Today, you can already visit www.floridaredistrioting.org's Plan Explorer page (directly at <http://mydistrictbuilderplanexplorer.wordpress.com/>) to see early submissions of redistricting maps and other very specific redistricting suggestions.

We hope to see you at a public meeting this summer, or hear from you via any of the resources mentioned above.

As always, please let us know if you have any questions or need for additional information.

Happy Monday!
